INTRODUCTION

«Al-Fihrist» compiled by Ibn-en-Nadim, Mohammad bin Ishaq (d. 438 A.H. = A.D. 1047) stands as the landmark through which the Arab culture – followed by the cultures of the world – came to know the only way to benefit from the written intellectual produce in its abundance and continually increasing variations, namely the recording, describing, and indexing the resources of a collection – or what is generally known as Bibliography – using various plans and different systems all aiming at providing the most comprehensive and accurate bibliographical citations relevant to a specific topic or topics within a historical or classified context. These plans and systems vary according to the aims set for each. Chief among the classifications and the most helpful for scholarly and research purposes may be those arranged according to subjects on the basis of explicit intellectual dimensions, complemented by specific historical and technical dimensions.

The statement embodied in the initial manifesto of the Centre for Arab Unity Studies which reads, «The Centre endeavors to prepare information, statistics, documents, references, and scholarly sources, on the diverse affairs of the Arab Society as one integral entity» necessarily indicates the task – among others – to compile a comprehensive bibliography of the sources and references for the Arab Unity Studies, whereby it furnishes scholars and researchers with the most extensive and accurate bibliographical data relevant to the subject, both past and modern. It also opens up ample different horizons for more intensive and extensive investigation of the various aspects of the Arab Unity and the aspirations of the Arab homeland to achieve cultural self-fulfilment in collaboration and solidarity.

Despite the numerous statistical and subject bibliographies available in Arabic and foreign languages, the subject of Arab Unity in its comprehensive civilizational concept has not enjoyed, as yet, an integrated independent bibliography, and has not been dealt with independently, but for one small work published by the United Arab Republic – Dar-el-Kutub, Cairo – in 1959 under the title: «A bibliography of works dealing with Arab Struggle for Freedom and Unity». It included bibliographical information on 380 books in Arabic and English. Hence the work of this Centre on the Arab Unity Bibliography project fulfils basic research and scholarly needs and bridges a wide gap in the Arabic and foreign libraries.

To define the intellectual framework for the issuance of a comprehensive reference work for the sources for Arab Unity Studies, four major trends may be discerned limiting its dimensions, namely:

1. Subject Dimensions:

A. The concept of Arab Unity inherent in this project does not only include the political thesis on the unity of the Arab countries from all its aspects, intellectual and applied, its history and reality in theory and in practice, but it surpasses this thesis to embrace a comprehensive civilizational vision of the Arab nation and the Arab homeland historically, culturally, scientifically, economically, and geographically, so that it includes every intellectual and scholarly work on all aspects of the Arab homeland or its various countries, dealt with generally or partially, and concerned with many countries or just confined to only two countries, in any domain whatsoever-literature, art, sociology, economics, politics, law, geography, history, and natural and applied sciences.... etc., as well as all what relates, intellectually and scientifically, to the ambitions and aspirations of the Arab nation to fulfil its unity. Commitment to this concept does not imply the preparation of a general bibliography on the Arab homeland, but it means, rather, to enable researchers involved in the study of Arab Unity, from all perspectives, to know as thoroughly as possible, the sources that help them to trace its historical origins, developmental stages, and diversified dimensions in theory and practice; to examine its contemporary possibilities; and to anticipate its future.

B. Though the project emphasizes the intellectual literature which assert positively the Unity of the Arab homeland and the cooperation of its countries, objectivity and the necessity to insure scholarly integrity and comprehensiveness require the inclusion of works dealing negatively with Arab unity, be that on regional and separational narrower grounds, or on wider grounds of melting the national perspective within expansive geographical, political, or religious circles. Inclusion of such works is imperative because this scholarly work does not concern itself with evaluating or judging the entries it contains, but it aims, rather, at providing the most exhaustive outlook of sources on Arab unity, Arab collaboration, and common Arab efforts – whatever the intellectual and political bases for these sources.

C. Though the basic criterion for including any work lies in its comprehensive concern with the Arab homeland as a whole, or a group of countries, or two countries at least, some issues relating to just one country have acquired a national context and occupied a central position within the national interest such as the Palestinian cause and the Algerian revolution... which necessarily demands the inclusion of works dealing with them as causes, not as countries, i.e. to differentiate between a work on the Palestinian cause and another on the geography of Palestine, or a work on the history of the Algerian revolution and another on self-management in Algerian plantations. The former are included and the latter excluded, for the sake of maintaining the objective structure designed for the project intact and unfragmented through including all what is written on everything in the Arab homeland.

D. Recognizing the unity of the Arab masses in their struggle for national liberation and unity, and recognizing the interrelatedness and overlapping of the independence movements in the Arab countries in their fight against similar imperialistic powers that partitioned the Arab homeland and dominated it, and recognizing the mutual influences among the various stages of the Arab regional liberation movements... it is imperative that the project includes all works on the history of political movements in each Arab country because they are, necessarily, relevant to the general context of liberation of the Arab homeland and its struggle for liberation and unity.

E. Other aspects may seem confined to one country only, but they are strongly relevant to the national context so that they cannot be ignored because they offer — though indirectly — rich material for research and study of the relationships among the various Arab countries, e.g. monographs on external commerce, or touristic activities, or general economic plans relating to one Arab country only.

F. Similar to the projects concern for works relevant to inter-Arab relationships, it is also concerned with the objective spheres relevant to the Arab homeland. Hence it includes all works dealing with regions of overlapping and convergence in many of the wider circles like the Islamic sphere, non-alignment, Afro-Asian sphere, the third world, and finally the global sphere. By regions of overlapping and convergence we mean the existing relationships between the Arab homeland or its countries and these spheres, whether they are comprehensive relationships such as the links with the Islamic sphere, or relationships of collaboration and cooperation such as the links with the non-aligned or Afro-Asian states, or relationships of struggle, contradiction, alliance, or mutual influences such as the relations with the super powers or the European and African cultures.

2. Historical Dimensions:

A. Inevitably, a point in time had to be specified as the starting date of the publications on Arab Unity to be included in this Bibliography. The year 1908 was adopted for several integral historical factors. Where events are concerned, in this year the Ottoman Parliament consented to grant its subjects a constitution; the Ottoman Arab Fraternity Society was founded with the consent of the Ottoman government; the Ottomans and the Imam Yahya were reconciled on the basis of an independent Yemen; and the Sharif Husain became ruler of Mecca. All this implies the formal recognition by the Ottoman Empire of a distinct Arab entity, to such an extent that this year, 1908, came to be known as the year of the Arab Constitution. As for the development of the national thought, this year demarcates increased crystallization of Arab national thought in its particular confrontation with the success of the Young Turks under the leadership of the Committee of Union and

Progress and its programme of Ottomanism (= Turkification).

B. Though the year 1908 is adopted as the formal starting point for the compilation of monographs and periodical literature included in the project, yet the historical dimensions expand to embrace the entire history of the Arab nation and the origins of the national thought extending through the ages, in two directions. First, the classical works that are considered major sources in the study of the development of the Arab state and the development of Arab political thought, e.g. Ibn Khaldun's Prolegomena – such works are not entered on their own, but all studies based on or derived from them and published after 1908 are. Second, the inclusion of all works dealing with historical eras or epochs renowned for the flourishing of unitary tendencies in the history of the Arabs, e.g. the rise of the first Arab state in the Umayyad era, or the union of Egypt and Syria in the Struggle against the Crusaders, or Mohammad Ali Pasha's attempt to establish a state embodying several Arab countries... and similar other historical epochs and experiences.

C. The adoption of the year 1980 as the final date was dictated by practical considerations, since this is the last year on which the required information is sufficiently available.

D. It was inevitable to include, in addition to the Arab-Islamic history, some foregin or international historical phases, such as the history of the Ottoman empire or the British empire or the conflicts amongst European imperialistic powers... Studies concerned with such issues deal, necessarily, with some aspects of the history of the Arab nation and its struggle for liberation and unity, as well as with the contradictory aspects, namely the efforts of some foreign powers to dominate the Arab homeland, or parts of it, to fragment its unity, and to sanctify its divisions. This renders such material of interest and value for the researchers in the history of unity and division in the Arab homeland, and consequently monographs and periodical literature covering such material are, naturally, included in this bibliography.

3. Technical Dimensions:

A. In the light of the project's comprehensive scope covering monograph and periodical literature, it was deemed fit to exclude daily, or weekly periodocals since their inclusion would deviate the project from its main aims, namely providing scholarly references and sources, to a different sphere, namely recording the development and trends of the National Thought as reflected in the press. Newspaper material, by nature, deals with the actual and current – which is important in many respects, but it is not one of the distinctive characteristics of scholarly research or reference studies. Hence it is more appropriate to limit the covering of periodicals to the biweekly, monthly, quarterly, and annual, where articles are assumably, closer to research or scholarly investigation, in addition to a few weekly periodicals, e.g. «Time» and «Newsweek», which enrich the project in perspective and vitality.

B. By comparison, the concept of «monographs» was expanded to embrace, in addition to published studies, unpublished theses and dissertations, documents of national scholarly and cultural meetings and conferences, and Arab and international reports and statistics – in an attempt to encompass all that aids researchers in their study of the various aspects and perspectives of Arab Unity.

C. With regard to the exhaustiveness and extensiveness of the material involved, and because it was not feasible – in many instances – to scrutinize the monograph or periodical article carefully and in detail, it was deemed fit to limit the bibliographical entry to the information sufficient and necessary for the perusal or acquisition of the work – specifically, name of author – person or corporate – full title of the work, place of publication, publisher, date of publication, number of pages (wherever possible).

D. To guarantee that all entries are classified according to the same scheme, and in keeping with the international bibliographical schemes followed by the chief world libraries, the American Congress Library «International Standard for Bibliographic Description» set by the Anglo-American Bibliographic Committee was adopted, with some modifications. This is in compliance with the recommendation of «The Arab Book Bibliographic Preparation» conference (Riyadh, 1973) which advised the Arab libraries and documentation centres to adopt the International Standard.

4. Classification Dimensions:

A. The first edition of this project is restricted to publications issued in Arabic, English and French, because they contain the majority of the basic scholarly sources for the study of Arab Unity. Publications in German, Russian, Spanish and Italian shall be considered at a later stage.

B. As a general classification principle, all publications issued by the Arab National Organizations and the United Nations Regional Centres in the Arab World are considered essential material to be covered by this bibliography, except what deviates clearly from the subject of Arab Unity, being directed towards educational or informational aims not immediately related to the issues of this subject. Exclusion of such material is the exception to the general principle.

C. Collection of material for this project relied on various sources, namely:

(1) Catalogues of the most significant libraries in the Arab World, chiefly: The Jafet Memorial Library at AUB, Beirut; the Egyptian Dar-el-Kutub, Cairo; and The Central Library, Baghdad.

(2) Catalogues of the most significant international libraries, namely: The Library of Congress, U.S., Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris; and The British Museum Library, London.

(3) Book-lists issued by the Arab libraries defining their holdings, whether they are inventories or classified-subject list.

(4) Available book-lists issued by Arab and Foreign publishers and distributors.

(5) International subject and classified bibliographies and indexes of scholarly periodicals concerned with Arab affairs.

(6) Bibliographies and indexes of Arabic and Foreign periodicals.

(7) Detailed review of periodicals — in particular Arabic periodicals — which lack bibliographies and indexes.

(8) Selected book-lists provided by various libraries in the Arab countries, in response to this Centre's request at the preliminary stages of this project.

(9) Publication-lists of the Arab National Organizations, and the United Nations Regional Centres in the Arab Homeland.

(10) Individual works obtained by this Centre from some scholars engaged in Bibliography in the Arab Homeland.

(11) The Arab Unity Bibliography prepared and included monthly in the special section of «Al-Mustakbal Al-Arabi» — the periodical issued by this Centre — is considered complementary material to this project to be added, together with material collected from other sources.

Finally, this book and the volumes preceded and that will follow, is the product of the continuous hardwork of the full-time Bibliography staff in the Documentation section at this Centre, who spared no effort, during four years, to obtain the greatest possible amount of information required for this project. Without their conscientiousness, sincerity and devotion, and their careful scrutinizing follow-up of the various diverse stages, it would not have been possible to accomplish all what has been accomplished. The Centre is gratefully indebted to all of them.

The Centre would also like to express its gratitude to Dr. Yusuf Khoury who technically supervised this project from its early stages, and to Professor Dr. Constantine Zurayk from whose counsel and guidance the project benefitted greatly, and Professor Dr. Abdul-Aziz Duri for the generous counsel and assistance he rendered to the staff of this project. The Centre also thanks Miss Rima Bortkosh, Librarian at ECWA, for the technical advice she offered to the project in its early stages — in her personal capacity. But the Centre alone is responsible for any failings or shortcomings that may be found in this Bibliography.

Centre for Arab Unity Studies

GUIDE

A work in this volume is entered under the names of its author, whether personal or corporate and arranged alphabetically according to the following scheme for full bibliographical citations:

1. Books:

   A. When full bibliographical details are available, entries are arranged as follows: author, title, edition, place of publication, publisher, date, number of pages or number of volumes, series, reviews in periodicals, serial number.

Example:

Abboushi, Wasif Fahmi. The Angry Arabs. Philadelphia: Westminister Press, 1974. 285 p.
Christianity Today: vol. 18, August 30, 1974. p. 28.
(W.S. Lasor) [19]

   B. Where there is more than one author (two or three) the entry is arranged under the first-mentioned author (first), then followed by the second and third authors.

Example:

Abu-Laban, Baha and Faith T.Zeady (eds.). Arabs in America: Myths and Realities. Wilmette, Ill.: Medina University Press International, 1975. xiii, 256 p. (AAUG Monograph Series, no. 5) [263]

   C. Where there are more than three authors the entry is arranged under the name of the author mentioned first, followed with [et al.].

D. Where there is no author, but there is an editor or compiler the entry is arranged under the name of the editor or compiler.

E. Where there is more than one editor or compiler, the arrangement followed is that mentioned in "B & C" above.

F. Conferences, seminars, and meetings are arranged under conference, seminar... except for the works of ECWA which are arranged under ECWA. Where the name of the author is specified on any paper presented in a conference, the entry is arranged under the name of the author.

Example 1:

> Conference on Middle Eastern Affairs, 10th, Washington, D.C., 1956. Tensions in the Middle East: A Series of Addresses. Edited by William Sands. Washington, D.C.: Middle East Institute, 1956. 67 p. [4841]

Example 2:

> «Middle East Crisis: Symposium.» Vital Speeches of the Day: vol. 33, July 15, 1967. pp. 578-605; August 1, 1967. pp. 610-621. [14014]

G. Organizations – Works published by organizations and specialized agencies are arranged directly under the name of the organization or agency – works isued by the various Arab League organizations follow the same arrangement, e.g. ALECSO. The only works arranged under the Arab League are those of the General Secretariat and its departments, with the appropriate references.

H. Governmental Documents – Entries are arranged under the relevant country, with the specific department or division, etc., added.

I. Universities, Mosques and Churches – Entries are arranged under the name of the university, mosque or church.

J. Banks and institutions – Entries are arranged under the name of the bank or institution.

2. Theses and Dissertations:

A. Theses and dissertations are arranged alphabetically within the monograph entries, with the specific pertinent bibliographical information added as follows: author, title, degree, university, school, year, number of pages, serial number.

Example:

Fargo, Mumtaz Ayoub. «Arab-Turkish Relations from the Emergence of Arab Nationalism to the Arab Revolt, 1848-1916.» (Doctoral Dissertation, University of Utah, 1969.) 301 p. [7068]

B. When a thesis (dissertation) is published, then Entries are restricted to the facts of publication.

3. Book Reviews:

Book reviews are arranged under the author of the book, not the reviewer, with the aim of including all the reviews of a certain book under the author of the book itself. Readers interested in finding the name of the reviewer may refer to the name-index appendixed to this volume. Items of information are arranged as follows: Title of periodical, volume (or year), issue, month, year, page numbers, reviewer, serial number.

Example:

Glassman, Jon D. Arms for the Arabs: The Soviet Union and War in the Middle East. Baltimore; London: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1975. viii, 243 p.
2nd printing. Johns Hopkins University Press, 1977. 243 p.
Canadian Journal of Political Science: vol. 11, no. 4, December 1978. pp. 913-914.(M.M. Mottale)
Gazelle Review: no. 2, 1977. pp. 57-63. (Kyril Fitzlyon)
Middle East Journal: vol. 30, no. 4, 1976. pp. 567-568. (J. Campbell)
Middle Eastern Studies: vol. 14, no. 1, January 1978. pp. 145-146; no. 2, pp. 240-250. (Geoffrey Wheeler)
Times Literary Supplement: no. 3894, October 29, 1976. pp. 1368-1369. (A Perlmutter) [8135]

4. Articles:

A. Entries follow the same scheme adopted for monographs above, including the specific bibliographical items pertaining to the articles, rranged in the following order: Author, title, periodical, volume (or year), issue, month, year, page numbers, serial number.

Example:

Farah, Caesar E. «The Dilemma of Arab Nationalism.» Die Welt des Islams: vol. 8, pt. 3, 1963. pp. 140-164. [7051]

B. Where there is no author for the article, entries are arranged under the name of the periodical.

Example:

Mid East. «Civil War in Jordan.» Mid East: vol. 10, no. 6, December 1970. pp. 21-24. [13992]

5. Arrangement

a) Works are arranged alphabatically.
b) The system of word by word is used.
c) The articles a, an, the, un, une are disregarded at the beginning of an entry.
d) al, el, de, du, l', la, le, von, van are disregarded unless they are part and parcel of the name.
e) Numbers are arranged as they are expressed in words.
f) Congresses are arranged consecutively according to their numbers.

6. Works are arranged: monographs then periodical literature according to the following: —

A — One author
B — One author (compiler, editor...)
C — Two authors
D — One author [et al.]

7. Cross References

a) See reference: Directs from a heading not used to another adopted.

Example:

Academy of Islamic Research see Conference of the Academy of Islamic Research...

b) see also reference: Indicates other headings under which related material may be found.

Example:

American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research see also Conference on World Oil...

8. Index

Index of co-authors, editors, compilers, translators, book reviewers excluding publishers.

9. Volumes:

The volume of authors shall be followed by another volume arranged alphabetically according to titles of books and articles. Each number indicates the number in the text. A third volume classified according to subjects shall follow.
